- I had a lot of fun in the class! Discussion portions were always really interesting since I was able to hear a bunch of different game experiences while also being able to talk about mine. Lecture portions were usually kept short and to the point which made it a lot easier to digest the information, I learned a lot of new stuff about game development that I wasn't expecting to hear about. - His level of enthusiasm and interest in the course combined with his positive attitude helped be both engaged and comfortable with the class and the work. - What was most valuable was how the instructor gave us the chance to be open about how we can take and use our inspirations from various different games and use them within our own projects. - The courses way of logically looking at the process of game design helped me understand how to go about the process in a much more efficient manner than previously. - I think that he is very knowledgeable on gaming and gaming related stuff that helped class move along really nicely to make it fun. - Professor Dimatteo's interest in all of our games that we made for class made me feel so proud of what I was able to accomplish. He truly just wants the best from his students and loves to see them succeed, with really helps, especially in a semester like the one we're all dealing with. He's knowledgeable in many aspects outside of what the course material covers, so he's able to answer some other partially related questions that students have about game concepts and designs. - I really enjoyed doing both the reviews and design challenges and they helped me learn more about games and the care that goes into them.

9 - 2.) Please indicate aspects of the instructor's teaching or of the course that you feel most need improvement.

- Honestly the only problems I had with the course were likely due to the condition we were put in for this semester. Sometimes it would be really difficult to get students involved with sharing design challenges, making a few of the classes a lot shorter due to people simply not sharing their stuff. For me, it made working on game projects at home more difficult, I wanted to try something digital for one of them, but ended up doing physical games and a mock-up for digital ones. - I don't think there is much. - I'm not exactly sure to be completely honest, the class always seemed interesting to me. - None. - Some of his beginning lectures were a little slow before we started the Game Design challenges, but things became a lot more fun and engaging once we started to have assignments due for class. - Its hard to say anything with the class being remote but I do feel that having another design challenge would be beneficial. Also, while not possible due to being remote, I think the design challenges being shown and discussed more in class would be nice.

- Please allow him to teach this and other gaming related classes more often. - I originally took this class because I enjoyed Professor Dimatteo's Zelda mini-course, but this class shaped up to be one of the most impactful classes I've taken in IMM. Not only is it because the content is helpful alongside Games I and II, but it's also refreshing to just be able to "nerd out" for a little while during our discussion of the game we made for class or the reviews we wrote beforehand. I think he's really well equipped to teach this class not only knowledge based, but also just his personality is welcoming and encourages you to speak about what you're passionate about. If I could, I'd probably take more classes taught by Matt. Between the mini-course and this class, I've always been looking forward to his classes. It's unfortunate that we couldn't meet in person, but I still enjoyed this class a ton regardless. - I really enjoyed the course though wish it could have been in person. I have no regrets on my decision to take it however.
